About this file

Qayd is a weekly newsletter on Palestinian prisoners in Israeli custody.

Issue 08, “One interview,” is published on social media as nine cards. Material closed on Nov. 8, 2026.

This file brings the nine cards together, with more detail than the cards had room for. Each section opens with the card as it was published, followed by the witnesses’ fuller accounts.

After the cards come material from the same week that did not fit on the cards.

Sources and links are at the end of the file, followed by notes on what we published.

Nine cards

One interview.

Abed Abu Shehadeh, a podcast host from Jaffa, interviewed Azmi Bishara, a former member of Israel's parliament, in Doha. Israeli police and the Shin Bet arrested him at his home on the night of Nov. 3. A Tel Aviv court kept him in custody until Sunday, Nov. 8, on suspicion of "contact with a foreign agent." He was released that day, five days after his arrest, with no charges filed, The Jerusalem Post reported. The same week, Israeli soldiers arrested Samer Khuwaira, a radio presenter, at his home in Nablus, and the isolation of Bushra al-Tawil, a journalist held under administrative detention since February, was renewed for another month, the Palestinian Commission of Detainees and Ex-Detainees Affairs said.

Abed Abu Shehadeh

The Arab48 podcast host interviewed Azmi Bishara, a former member of Israel's parliament, in Doha.

Israeli police and the Shin Bet, Israel's internal intelligence service, arrested Abu Shehadeh at his home in Jaffa on the night of Nov. 3.

He was released from custody five days later. No charges were filed, The Jerusalem Post reports.

IN DETAIL

Adalah, which Al Jazeera English describes as part of his defense team, said on Nov. 4 that "Abed Abu Shehadeh's interrogation and detention concern a single interview," The Jerusalem Post reported. The words on the cover are the newsletter's short form of that count; the quotation is Adalah's, as The Jerusalem Post printed it.

The Times of Israel reported on Nov. 4 that Abu Shehadeh hosts the Arab48 news site's podcast Al-Midan, and that he "traveled to Doha over a week ago to interview Bishara for Arab48." His defense lawyers say the foreign agent named in the suspicion is Azmi Bishara, a former member of Israel's parliament, the paper reported. Al Jazeera English wrote that he was arrested "after taking part in an interview in Qatar with the Palestinian intellectual Azmi Bishara."

The Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) says Israeli police and the Shin Bet, "the country's internal intelligence service," arrested him at his home in Jaffa on the night of Nov. 3. The Jerusalem Post reported that the Shin Bet and Israel Police "arrested Abu Shehadeh at his Jaffa home overnight," with a court hearing on Wednesday, Nov. 4. His family said about 15 security personnel took part in the raid, The Times of Israel reported.

On Nov. 8, The Jerusalem Post reported that he "was released from custody five days after being arrested by the Shin Bet (Israel Security Agency) and Israel Police" over suspected contact with a foreign agent, and that "No charges were filed against Abu Shehadeh." Haaretz reported that he was released on Sunday without appearing in court, after police and the Shin Bet security service decided not to seek an extension of his detention. The Times of Israel reported that police chose not to challenge his release, so a second remand hearing was cancelled.

Upon his release, he described his detention as “wrongful” and “completely baseless,” The Jerusalem Post reported. Adalah said police raised no other allegations during his questioning, the paper reported. Reports differ on the conditions of his release, so none are given here.

This week in custody, as reported

Bushra al-Tawil’s isolation is renewed for a month, the Palestinian Commission of Detainees and Ex-Detainees Affairs says.

Nov. 3–4

Israeli police and the Shin Bet arrest Abed Abu Shehadeh at home in Jaffa.

Nov. 8

Abu Shehadeh is released from custody five days after his arrest. No charges were filed, The Jerusalem Post reports.

IN DETAIL

CPJ’s case page reads: “On November 2, 2026, Israeli soldiers arrested Samer Khuwaira, in Nablus, in the occupied West Bank.” Its Nov. 5 alert says soldiers “arrested Radio Hawa presenter Samer Khuwaira from his home in Nablus.”

The Palestinian Commission of Detainees and Ex-Detainees Affairs said in an Arabic-language statement on Nov. 4 that Bushra al-Tawil’s isolation had been renewed on Nov. 2 for an additional month. The statement is the only source we found for the renewal; it is attributed to the Commission wherever it appears.

CPJ gives the night of Nov. 3 for Abu Shehadeh’s arrest at his home in Jaffa; The Jerusalem Post and Al Jazeera English describe it as overnight, with the court hearing on Wednesday, Nov. 4. The release on Nov. 8 is The Jerusalem Post's report: five days after the arrest, with no charges filed.

The hearing, Nov. 4, as reported

On Nov. 4, the Tel Aviv Magistrate's Court kept Abed Abu Shehadeh in custody until Sunday, Nov. 8, on suspicion of "contact with a foreign agent."

a journalist

"a political adviser"

According to CPJ, a police representative at the hearing called him a journalist, then retracted it after a recess and called him "a political adviser."

IN DETAIL

The Times of Israel reported that the court "orders him kept in custody for an additional four days until Sunday, rather than the eight days requested by police." The Jerusalem Post wrote that police had asked for an eight-day extension and that the judge "found reasonable suspicion and grounds for continued detention." CPJ and Al Jazeera English give the date as Sunday, Nov. 8. Reports differ on the number of days, so this file says only that the court kept him until Sunday, Nov. 8.

CPJ reported that a police representative at the hearing first called him a journalist and, "after a recess she retracted this statement and instead said he is a political adviser." The Times of Israel reported that the judge said he had described himself in his interrogation as a political consultant.

The Times of Israel also reported: "A police representative at the Tel Aviv court declines to say whether Bishara is the foreign agent or whether the podcast is the reason for the arrest, and refers the judge to a confidential dossier submitted by investigators."

The Jerusalem Post reported that "Police on Wednesday placed a three-day gag order on the investigation." The Times of Israel reported that the Tel Aviv Magistrate's Court "has removed the gag order on the case." Al Jazeera English reported that Adalah, part of his defense team, said it would appeal; no ruling on an appeal was found before his release.

A letter, reported Nov. 6

“Interviewing political figures — including controversial ones — is the core work of journalism in a free society.”

— Brad Lander, Daniel Biss and Scott Wiener, incoming U.S. congressmen, in a letter urging Israel to release Abed Abu Shehadeh

IN DETAIL

The Jerusalem Post reported on Nov. 6 that three newly elected Jewish members of the U.S. Congress, Brad Lander, Daniel Biss and Scott Wiener, had written to urge Israel to release Abu Shehadeh. The Times of Israel reported the letter the same day.

The letter also said, as The Jerusalem Post quoted it: “No one should be detained for journalism, or held on evidence they cannot see.” According to The Times of Israel, the letter described “some fifteen masked Israel Police and Shin Bet officers” entering his home.

The letter was reported on Nov. 6; he was released on Nov. 8. The congressmen’s names follow The Jerusalem Post; The Times of Israel gives the third name as Steve Weiner.

Same week, Nablus

Israeli soldiers arrested Samer Khuwaira, a Radio Hawa presenter, at his home in Nablus on Nov. 2.

April 10, 2025 – Jan. 7, 2026

Previously held in Israeli custody.

Nov. 2

Taken to the Huwara detention center, then to Salem.

By Nov. 5

His lawyer told CPJ that Khuwaira will likely face administrative detention without any charges.

IN DETAIL

CPJ's Nov. 5 alert says he "was taken to the Huwwara Detention Center and then to the Salem Detention Center"; its case page calls the second place an interrogation center and says "The journalist was previously imprisoned from April 10, 2025 to January 7, 2026." CPJ spells the first place Huwwara; this file uses Amnesty International's spelling, Huwara.

CPJ's Nov. 5 alert reports his lawyer: "According to his lawyer in an interview with CPJ, the journalist will likely face administrative detention without any charges." The lawyer's own words are not quoted on CPJ's page, so the card reports him rather than quoting him. Administrative detention is detention by military order without charge or trial; CPJ's alert describes it as detention "without any charges."

We found no report of an administrative detention order against Khuwaira as of Nov. 8, 2026, on the pages we checked: CPJ, the Palestinian Prisoners' Society, the Commission, Haaretz, The Times of Israel and The Jerusalem Post. Haaretz, in a Nov. 3 report, named his station differently from CPJ; the cards follow CPJ.

On Nov. 5, CPJ said it had emailed the Israeli army and police for comment and "did not receive a reply at the time of publication."

IN DETAIL

CPJ's alert of Nov. 5, on Khuwaira and other journalists, says: "CPJ emailed the Israel Defense Forces and Israeli police for comment on the respective cases" and "did not receive a reply at the time of publication." On Abu Shehadeh, CPJ wrote separately that its "email to the Israeli police on Abu Shehadeh's arrest did not receive a response by the time of publication."

We found no statement by the Israeli government, police or Shin Bet on either arrest in the pages we checked as of Nov. 8, 2026. The Israeli side of the record in this issue is the court's decision of Nov. 4 and the police decision, reported on Nov. 8, not to seek an extension.

Reported Oct. 11

Four more months

IN DETAIL

CPJ's case page says she was arrested on Feb. 5, 2026, "at the Ein Sinya military checkpoint near Ramallah, in the occupied West Bank." The Commission says she is from the city of al-Bireh and has been held under administrative detention since Feb. 5, 2026. Addameer, a Palestinian prisoners' rights organization, gives her age as 33.

CPJ records the orders as follows: "On February 12, 2026, Taweel received a four-month administrative detention order from an Israeli court." On June 11, 2026, her attorney, "Ashraf Abu Sneineh of the Palestinian Prisoner's Society told CPJ that the Ofer Military Court had extended her administrative detention for an additional four months." On Oct. 11, 2026, "Taweel's mother Muntaha told CPJ that the Israeli Supreme Court extended Taweel's detention for another four months."

According to Abu Sneineh, CPJ writes, the detention order "was based primarily on allegations that she posed 'a threat to public security,' even though no indictment had been filed against her." CPJ spells her name Taweel; the registry of this newsletter uses al-Tawil.

The bar on the card marks only dated facts: the arrest on Feb. 5, the three orders as CPJ reports them, the start of her isolation on Aug. 17 as the Commission reports it, and the Commission's latest dated account, Nov. 4. No duration was calculated.

Nov. 2

Renewed for one more month

As of Nov. 4

Held in Ohalei Oz prison, Beersheba

She has lost 16 kilograms since her arrest, has one set of clothes and has not been given winter blankets, the Commission says.

IN DETAIL

The Palestinian Commission of Detainees and Ex-Detainees Affairs, the Palestinian Authority body for prisoners' affairs, published its account in Arabic on Nov. 4, 2026. It says the Damon prison administration isolated her on Aug. 17, 2026; that she was moved on Aug. 23, 2026, to Neve Tirza prison in Ramla; that the isolation was renewed on Nov. 2, 2026, for an additional month; and that she is serving her current isolation in Ohalei Oz prison in Beersheba. Anadolu Agency placed her in the "Ohalei Oz isolation facility in Beersheba" on Oct. 7, citing a joint statement of the Prisoners' Society, Addameer and the Commission.

The Commission says she has lost 16 kilograms since her arrest, has only one change of clothes, and has not been given winter blankets. It says she contracted scabies while in Damon and does not know the reason for her isolation. These are the Commission's statements; no second source was found for them, and the Israel Prison Service's position was not found on any page we checked.

The Palestinian Prisoners' Society, a Ramallah-based NGO, said through its spokesperson Amani Sarahneh, as Al Jazeera Net reported on Nov. 6, that she had been in solitary confinement for more than two months, had been forced to drink contaminated water, was surrounded at all times by cameras, and had been visited only three times.

Reports on where she was held in October differ. Anadolu placed her in Ohalei Oz on Oct. 7. The Prisoners' Society said on Oct. 18 that she had been moved from Damon to the isolation section of Ramla prison. The Commission's Nov. 4 account gives the sequence printed on the card.

On Sept. 20, Palestinian prisoners' organizations, in a joint statement published by Addameer, "called for the immediate release of Al-Tawil and an end to her isolation."

“Likely to be placed under administrative detention”

Sources
Amnesty International, Nov. 5, 2026; CPJ, Nov. 5, 2026; Addameer

Two men arrested near Nablus, Ghassan Najjar in Burin and Samer Khuwaira in the city, are expected to be placed under administrative detention: a military interrogator told Najjar’s lawyer so, Amnesty International says, and Khuwaira’s lawyer told CPJ so. We found no report of an order against either man by Nov. 8, 2026.

IN DETAIL

Amnesty International said on Nov. 5, 2026, that Ghassan Najjar, a farmer and land defender, was arrested “during a pre-dawn raid on the village of Burin south of Nablus,” and that “A military interrogator informed Ghassan Najjar’s lawyer that he is likely to be placed under administrative detention.” Amnesty said he was “currently held in the Huwara military detention facility” and “had already spent nearly a decade in Israeli jails, mostly under administrative detention.” “His first arrest came when he was just 15 years old,” Amnesty wrote.

Samer Khuwaira’s lawyer told CPJ the same, in CPJ’s words: he “will likely face administrative detention without any charges.”

“As of October 2026, Israeli authorities had been holding 3,101 Palestinians under administrative detention,” Amnesty wrote. Addameer’s table of prisoners as of the end of September 2026 gives the same figure, 3,101 administrative detainees, among 9,300 political prisoners. The two figures are likely one count, not two.

We found no report of an administrative detention order against either man on the pages we checked as of Nov. 8, 2026.

The Amarneh family

Sources
RSF, July 16, 2026; CPJ

Three journalists of one family from Dheisheh refugee camp, south of Bethlehem, have been in Israeli custody this year, by the accounts of RSF and CPJ.

IN DETAIL

Islam Amarneh, a freelance reporter, was arrested on May 3, 2026. CPJ writes: “On May 3, 2026, Israeli soldiers arrested freelance reporter Islam Amarneh in Dheisheh camp.”

Reporters Without Borders (RSF) says she was “arrested at her father’s home in the Dheisheh refugee camp,” and that “on 1 June, she was transferred to the women’s section of Damon.” CPJ, citing Quds News Network, recorded on Oct. 12 that a court “extended Amarneh’s detention until November 2026.” The Israeli military told CPJ she “was apprehended for questioning on suspicion of involvement in illegal security activities.” We found no report on a further hearing as of Nov. 8.

Osaid Amarneh was “arrested by Israeli authorities at his home east of Bethlehem on 27 August 2025” and “has been held at Ofer Prison in the occupied West Bank near Ramallah,” RSF wrote on July 16, 2026, adding that he “saw his detention extended by six months only three days after the arrest of his sister.” RSF and CPJ spell his first name differently; the newsletter’s registry form is used here.

Moath Amarneh was released on April 9, 2026, after a first detention, and re-arrested on Sept. 10, 2026, “when Israeli forces raided his home in Dheisheh refugee camp, south of Bethlehem,” CPJ writes from his wife’s account. “On September 14, his family was informed that Amarneh was being held in Ofer Prison, in the occupied West Bank,” and on Sept. 17, 2026, an Israeli court ordered four months of administrative detention, she told CPJ. CPJ and RSF differ on the length of his first detention and on how he is related to the other two, so neither is stated here.

How many journalists Israel holds

The counts differ by who counts, when, and what is counted. Each is given with its issuer and date.

Sources
CPJ; Palestinian Prisoners’ Society via Anadolu and QNA; RSF; Al Jazeera Net

IN DETAIL

CPJ, Feb. 19, 2026: “Thirty remain in custody, as of February 17, 2026.” In the same report, the Israeli military told CPJ that “individuals detained are treated in accordance with international law.”

The Palestinian Prisoners' Society, via Anadolu Agency, Sept. 13, 2026: "Israel is holding 37 Palestinian journalists," "including 19 under administrative detention." Via Qatar News Agency, Aug. 12, 2026: the number had "reached 40," and "19 journalists are currently being held in administrative detention."

RSF, July 16, 2026: "Of the 19 Palestinian journalists from the West Bank currently held by Israeli authorities, 15 were detained after that date," and "three other Palestinian journalists from the Gaza Strip are being held." The same page elsewhere refers to "the 20 other Palestinian journalists currently held in Israeli jails."

The Prisoners' Society, as Al Jazeera Net reported on Nov. 6, 2026, spoke of about 37 journalists in administrative detention, a different definition from its September count. No Israeli-sourced count of detained journalists was obtained.

Notes

We edit published posts only to correct factual errors. Anything that needs explaining is noted here.

Notes on what we published

The cover line. “One interview.” is the newsletter’s short form of what Adalah, part of Abu Shehadeh’s defense team, said: that his interrogation and detention “concern a single interview.” The full quotation is in the first section.

How many days. Reports differ on the length of the Nov. 4 extension: four days, five days or eight. All agree on the end date, Sunday, Nov. 8, and we print only that.

His release. Reports differ on the conditions of his release and on whether the investigation continues. We print neither. The Jerusalem Post’s report that no charges were filed is attributed to it on the card.

Names and spellings. Abed Abu Shehadeh is spelled as CPJ, The Jerusalem Post and Haaretz spell it; The Times of Israel and Al Jazeera English spell it differently. Bushra al-Tawil is spelled as the newsletter’s registry spells it; CPJ writes Taweel. Osaid Amarneh follows the registry; RSF and CPJ each spell it differently. The congressmen’s names follow The Jerusalem Post.

Reporting in Arabic. The statements of the Palestinian Commission of Detainees and Ex-Detainees Affairs and of the Palestinian Prisoners’ Society were read in Arabic. Their contents are given in English in our own words, without quotation marks.

Where she was held in October. Anadolu placed Bushra al-Tawil in Ohalei Oz on Oct. 7; the Prisoners’ Society said on Oct. 18 she had been moved from Damon to isolation in Ramla. The card prints the Commission’s Nov. 4 sequence and dates each stop.

What is not here. No report on a further hearing for Islam Amarneh was found when this issue closed, so none is mentioned. Party affiliations named by sources are not printed. No minor is named.

Method and images

On method. Every sentence in this file rests on a published source we read before the issue was published; the sources and links are on the preceding pages. Where two sources differ on a number or a date, we note the discrepancy where it arises rather than choose between them. A serious event reported by only one source is attributed to that source in the same sentence.

On the images. The issue has no photographs and no generated images. The images in this file are the cards as published.
